ABOUT THIS DOCUMENT

Editorial Note

This compendium curates the substantive information available across the original Khelat Bhawan website. It is intentionally limited to material published there: historical claims, family lineage, trust activities, venue information, event listings, gallery descriptors, visitor feedback summaries and contact details.

Repeated menus, form fields, technical interface text and visibly duplicated gallery entries are not reproduced. Visitor comments are summarized rather than republished at length. Time-sensitive listings and prices are identified as information shown on the source website and should be reconfirmed directly before planning a visit or booking.

01 · IDENTITY

Khelat Bhawan at a Glance

Khelat Bhawan—also presented on the website as Pathuria Ghata Ghosh Bari—is described as a living centre of Bengali culture, music and devotion established in 1845.

ESTABLISHED	1845, at 47 Pathuria Ghata Street in North Kolkata.
CULTURAL ROLE	A family heritage house associated with religious observance, classical music, cultural activity, social service and community gathering.
LIVING TRADITION	The website presents an unbroken Durga Puja tradition beginning in 1855, alongside Jagadhatri Puja and daily devotional service.
SPIRITUAL MEMORY	Sri Ramakrishna Paramhansa is stated to have visited the house in 1881, a moment central to its spiritual history.
CONTEMPORARY USE	The property is presented as an active cultural venue available for ceremonies, performances, photography, filming, workshops and selected corporate events.

“This house isn’t bricks and walls – it is Bengal’s cultural soul.”

02 · STORY & PURPOSE

A House of Culture, Devotion and Community

The website describes Khelat Bhawan as a cultural and religious heart of Kolkata whose family custodians have continued its traditions across generations.

The property is presented as a place where architecture, ritual, music and community life remain intertwined. Its historic courtyards and interiors support sacred observances, family traditions, artistic gatherings and contemporary heritage experiences.

Founder

Khelat Ghosh is identified as the founder and visionary associated with the establishment of Khelat Bhawan. The website credits the founding generation with creating the cultural estate and beginning a lineage of patronage and stewardship.

Mission

- Preserve Bengali cultural and spiritual traditions.
- Support classical music, performing arts and cultural learning.
- Maintain the house, its architecture and its sacred practices for future generations.
- Serve the community through education, cultural participation and social welfare.

Architectural character

Across the original website, the mansion is associated with traditional Bengali courtyards, heritage interiors, carved woodwork, marble spaces, columns, railings and period architectural details. These features are presented both as cultural inheritance and as settings for worship, performance, ceremonies and visual documentation.

Accuracy note

The original site contains a few inconsistencies between pages—for example, the Artist Nectar Council is dated 1985 on the About page while elsewhere it is labelled “2000+”. This compendium preserves that distinction instead of resolving it with outside information. Likewise, event dates, prices, visitor metrics and availability are reproduced as website-published information and may no longer be current.

Scope note

This is an editorially curated record, not an independent historical verification. No external historical sources, third-party articles or facts from the redesigned website were used to add or expand claims.
